Introduction

At our esteemed computer institute, our unwavering mission is to empower individuals with the knowledge, skills, and confidence to thrive in the ever-evolving digital age. We strive to nurture inquisitive minds, foster creativity, and instill a passion for technology in our students. Through our comprehensive curriculum and industry-leading practices, we aim to cultivate a generation of skilled professionals who will shape the future of computing.

Hardware Course

Central Processing Unit (CPU)

The central processing unit (CPU) is the main component of a computer that processes data and runs applications and the operating system. It's often called the "brain" of the computer because it's responsible for all computing tasks

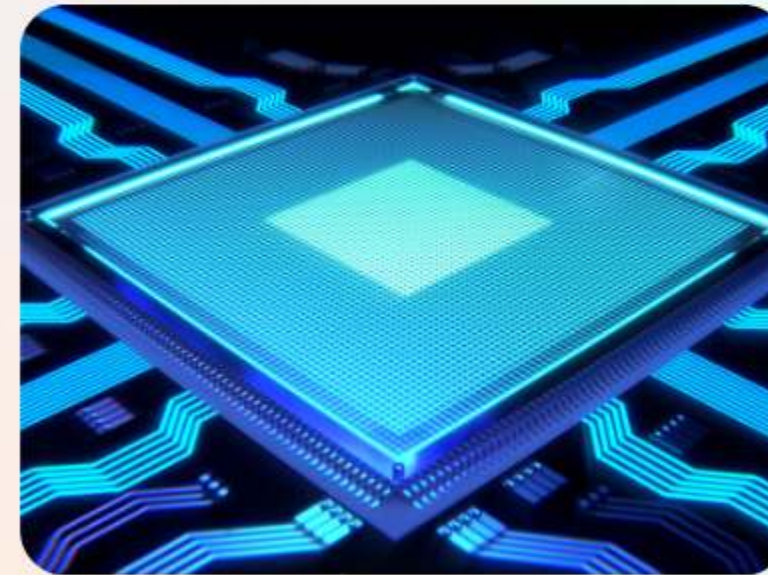

Memory (RAM and Storage)

RAM, or random access memory, is a type of computer memory that stores data temporarily for quick access by the computer's processor. It's a fundamental part of computing and is found in nearly all devices, including desktops, tablets, smartphones, and smart TVs
